Amendments to the Specification:

On page 2, please amend the paragraph starting on line 9 as follows:

In addition to controlling the copying of content, it would also be useful for enforcement, market analysis and other purposes to know content distribution information such as a trail of copier related information or a trail of network nodes participating in the distribution of content. For example, when the content distribution information is copier related information, then the copier related information may include information related to the generation of a copy of the content, such as any one or more of the following: information as to the identification of the copier (e.g., a user identification of a user of the copier or an IP address of the copier), information as to how the copy was generated (e.g., what computer platform and operating system was used), information as to when the copy was generated (e.g., the time of copy generation or other processing according to a specified time zone or the time zone associated with the copier), ~~what computer platform and operating system was used~~, and information as to the format that the copy was generated into (e.g., a downloadable file residing in computer memory or a file stored on a tangible, removable medium).
